Now that the music festival is over people will once more begin a round of gaiety. The school and college commencements are interesting many and the public examinations are attracting friends, who anticipate the success of their particular favorite. The weddings announced for June are numerous. Among them are those of Miss Lillie May Orner to Mr. William H. Bockstahler, Miss Camilla Walker and Mr. Howard A. Dill, Miss Birdie McKernan and Mr. McMorrow, Miss Burnett Bloomer and Mr. Horatio Kelsey, Miss Edith Kahn and Mr. Steifel of Fort Wayne, Miss Hattie Weed and Mr. Millard F. Cox, Miss Daisy White and Mr. Harry Porter, Miss Grace Adams and Mr. Frank Wood, Miss Kate Shepard and Mr. S. A. Townsend, Miss Carra Atkins and Mr. A. D. Gates of Chicago, Miss Harriet Atkins and a gentleman of Colorado Springs, Miss Ella Sullivan and Mr. John Heffern, Miss Ora Wilkins and Mr. Lash, and a few others not yet announced. As weddings are the most absorbing events, before, at the time and after the ceremony, the social world will be submerged with gossip relative to the occurrences. Whether each one will cling to the old adage and wear

Something old,
Something new,
Something borrowed,
Something blue,
is a matter which usually falls to the best friend or maid of honor to attend to. The duties of a maid of honor and best man are an art in themselves. It is to be hoped that no best man will allow the embarrassing situation which one did not long since. The bride and her maids arrived at the church at the appointed hour, and after arranging themselves proceeded up the aisle. "to the strains of the wedding march." They reached the altar, but the minister, groom and best man were not there to meet them. A half minute, a whole minute, and then two, three and four minutes passed, and just as the fifth minute began its career they appeared. Four minutes at such a time "was like unto a thousand years." The agony endured was something never to be forgotten. The minister had a previous engagement which barely gave him time to get to the church at 8 o'clock, and a very small delay almost wrecked the good temper of the bride and happiness of the occasion. If the best man had understood his duty it could not have occurred.
